AN IRON BOX.

The Excitement Created by Its Discovery at Peekskill.

WHAT DID IT CONTAIN?

Those Who Dug It Up Refuse to Tell.

prides steelf on its new waterworks, which, during the past year, has supplied them with wholesome drinking water; and the good Slaters of St. Francis Conto have the new water brought into their grounds. For that purpose a line was traced along the sloping djacent to the convent so as to dig the ditch, there the new water pipes were to be safely encounced, and lurnish the Sisters and their pupils with good and wholesome water. Workmen were engaged to attend to the job, and two men servants of the djoining farm, forming part of the religious institu-ion, were detailed to assist.

The work progressed without the least interruption for several days, when on Monday of last week, after he duch had already assumed considerable propor-tion. John Shaughnessy, one of the laborers, while at work with his shovel, suddenly exclaimed, "Hallo! ere is a box." Looking once more closely into the something for all of us." Only two other men were at work with him at the time, and these were the two ervants above mentioned, Valentine and John Huber, brothers, who had been engaged on the farm of the convent ever since the present Lady Superior took charge of the institution two years ago. John Huber said, in broken English, "Well, that looks like something; we may find some more," and with an eye to before even the box was lifted from its e find or let each man keep what he finds ?" The two otners immediately replied, "Let us divide."

It was so agreed, and the box was lifted up the hill. This occurred on Monday of last week. Now, what Shaffer, a gentieman who has taken great interest in the success of the St. Francis Convent, obtain any correct information in regard to the valuables found. He did receive from one of the men a coin, the metal of which is yet a matter of doubt, but the best informed citizens of the piace affirm that though thus far the secret has been well kept not only gold and silver, but even diamonds have been found in the box, which was of 1700, soventeen infectes long, into inches wide and nibe inches deep.

Ar. Dindar, a prominent citizen of Peekskill, was of the opinion yesterday that the box was buried in that place during the Revolutionary War and has remained there ever since. He does not think that a triffing amount would have been thus carefully boxed and bidden, and instead of it containing hundreds he rather inclines to the belief that it contained thousands.

CONTRADICTORY STATEMENTS.

Another gentleman said that the German servants on the grounds were not at all so stupid as they appeared to be; they had evidently been instructed to sell their side of the story in an innocent manner. He called attention to the fact that she men chaimed that they had broken the tron box up with their tools at hand, an impossibility on the very lace of it, is none of the tools used for the digging of a simple dich could be available for that purpose. Again, their statement that the box was only four inches long, instead of seventeen, gave evidence of a discrepancy that added considerably to the mystery.

A printer named Kelley stated yesterday that on Sudday, while on an excursion up the river, one of the men generally employed on the grounds of the convent, while in the fullness of beer, stated that at least $1.800 had been found in the box, but that those new having charge of the treasure preferred to keep the matter secret. Nobody, not even the convent authorities, denied that a box with valuables had been found, but the amount of the treasure-trove and the whereabouts of the box remain for the present complete mysteries. ALLEGED OUTBAGE BY A POLICEMAN-A WOMAN ASSAULTED IN BATTERY PARK.

The morning returns from the First precinct to Police Headquarters yesterday stated that a woman named Hattle Adams, twenty eight years old, had at tempted suicide at the Battery sea wall at five o'clock and was prevented from soing so by an officer named Ganiey, who was on post there at the time. The re port further stated that the officer's face was badly scratched in his efforts to save the woman from self-destruction, and that after her re-moval to the station house she was taken to Coambers Street Hospital suffering from un attack of spasms. A reporter who called at Cham-bers Street Hospital to make inquiries about the woman's condition received an entirely different version of the affair. According to her story she had spent the night before in Jersey City with a lady spent the night before in Jersey City with a say, where she is employed, when she met the officer. She would not name the hotel nor give the address of any friend, nave one whom she called Alexander, and who, she said, is employed in Dietz's restaurant, near Brooklyn City Hall. She is apparently a woman who has received a good education, and is of genicel appearance. Here

MAKING AN ACQUAINTANCE

While standing hear the sea wall, she says, the officer approached her and began a convortation, with the evident intention of forcing an acquaintance. She gave him no encouragement, but he persisted in anhoying her as that she slapped his face, and, in so doing, knocked his hat in the water. In return, he took her by the arm and knocked her hat off, which also fell in the water. During the struggle that followed between them the officer struggle that followed between them the officer struggle that followed between them the officer struggle that followed between them they officer in the abdomen, and she anneed and could followed be state her residence or occupation. One of the surgeous at the hospital states that during the time sho was suffering from bysteria she made use of vile language. She became so violent that a saratifacket hid to be used on her, but she managed to get it off easily in a few moments. In the evening suc was removed to the New York Hospital, in West Fifteenth street, whore she became quiet. She continued, however, in her determination not to make know her residence or place of employment. All that could be learned from her is that she and her sister were born at sea and lived at Andover, Mass. where her sister is at present. Thoir parents have been dead some years, and it was only because she could obtain no other employment that she sought a situation as a servant.

GOVERNOR HENDRICKS.

A SPEECH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA ON REVOLUTION-SOME HISTORICAL REFER-ENCES-THE CONFLICT BETWEEN THE MANY

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 26, 1878.

The oration before the two literary societies of the University of Virginia, was delivered, to-night, by ence of a very large and fashionable audience. Mr. Hendricks was introduced by Mr. Windham A. Mercdith, of Richmond, the chairman of the Committee of Invitation. He occupied about an hour in the delivery of the speech. He said he felt em-barrassed in the selection of a theme. He did not speak in this place of the classics and their comparative merits, nor of the of these already, and so he chose for his theme "Revolution." He felt justified in this choice on account of the glorious services of Virginia in the Revolution of '76, and especially as he was to speak in the University established by that great philosopher and statesman, Thomas Jefferson, whose wisdom and learning contributed so much to that great revolution and its consequences. The speaker defined revolution as a protest against the oppression and injustice of the past. It has for its inspiration the correction of wrong and for its passion the hatred of restraint. Sometimes it is an impulse; sometimes a growth. It is a remedy for great evils not otherwise removable; a poses, of meeting in conference the other members of the Silver Commission-namely, Mosars Fenton and Walker-although, as he says, the business for which he was invited here has not been special cally mentioned in the note addressed him by Mr Evarts. The other members of the commission have not yet reached the city.

MR. GROESBRCK'S VIEWS. Mr. Grossbeck was averse to giving any expression of his opinions or views on the work before the Com-mission except that it had a momentous interest for mission except that it had a momentous interest for the public. He was satisfied that the problem of the relative value of gold and silver would determine itself by letting the two metals resume their places side by eide as currency or money. It was true that, with a silver dollar worth only ninety cents in gold, the value of gold was just now something more than sixteen times that of silver, weight for weight, but an inequality of this kind and in the other direction could be created by throwing aside gold and sllowing only a small portion of it to be comed into mosey. All the surplus gold would be simply merchandise and would rise and fall to value just lake merchandise. There would be a fall in the price of gold as there had been in that of silver.

TWO SCHOONERS SUNK.

DETROIT, June 26, 1878. The schooners Peshtigo and Saint Andrews collated about one o'clock this morning, between Skilla-gales Light and Beaver Island. Both vessels sunk at once. The crew of the St. Andrews was picked up by the propeller Ocean and taken to Sheboygan. The Peshigo's crow, except the second mate and one sen man, were rescued by a steamer bound up. The Peshitgo was bound up with coal; the St. Andrews down, with a cargo of corn. The thick weather is the reported cause of the collision.
